Inside

Who Cares...2

Who Cares:
Dear Blabbey answers the pathetic problems of people who can't get their sad lives together. She answers in her usual tactless and oh, so sweet way. Horridscope predicts another bad day for everyone, we actually got to get someone to write this column who actually likes people. I would take her advice Saint Leo College and just stay home. Also a long held belief that Lake Jovita is sitting on top of an oil site has been proven, which I guess explains the lakes special odor.

Coming in the next issue:
Is President Saddam Hussein seeking political asylum from Saint Leo College? Is it true that the editor's of the Monarch are being held against their will to be executed? Is Robert Ruday leaving, or is he really a criminal as was reported last year?

Point to Ponder

The two pages of the ÝAnarchyý have been written in celebration of April Fool's Day (better late then never). Our little joke on the students, faculty, and administration is just that, and should not be taken seriously. We hope you enjoy reading this special publication as much as we enjoyed bringing it to you.

Invasion of alien pods

By Al Hava Bier
Exchange student from Slobovia

Run for your lives!!
Alien pods, cunningly disguised as black, gas or water tanks have been buried all over campus. These pods are filled with alien-type things with multiple appendages and serious skin problems.

A secret study, conducted by Air Force alien-type phenomenon specialist Joe Delusion, has determined that these beings are from somewhere else, perhaps even out of state. According to Delusion, these aliens have two goals: to

SLC P.O Box possessed

By M. T. Box
Anarchy Staff Writer

After hearing hundreds of complaints from students, faculty, and administrators that post office boxes have been empty for weeks, the Post Office decided to investigate the matter.
The private eye hired by the Post Office has divulged the information that the situation undoubtedly points towards mail theft. The postal employees testify that they have been delivering mail to the individual boxes as usual. Yet, it seems that no one is receiving it.
One student, Wili Lamy, stated, "My mother sent me a chocolate card for Easter two weeks ago, and I still haven't gotten it!" The strange thing is that one of the postal workers remembers putting the card in the young girl's box.
Another student reported crunching sounds coming from his box before he slipped his key in the hole. "The little window thing was all black and noises like someone was eating a carrot were coming from inside," he later stated.
The investigator suspected mail snatching from lonely spirits haunting Saint Leo College; "I think they want the living to 'keep in touch,' and the phone lines used by mediums have been down for the past month and a half. They are probably trying to find another way to communicate with us here on the other side of life."
It was suggested that a priest come in and perform an exorcism. Permission was granted by the Pope; Father Gittim Back read the rites.
It seems as though the exorcism has not had much effect on the disappearance of mail. As of today, post office boxes are still empty. It is rumored that due to the severity of the situation, the Ghost Busters will be brought in at any cost.
We can only hope for the best.

CCE captures Lewis Hall, closes dorms

By Ti Raid
Anarchy Man

Saint Leo College has announced today that starting next fall the Center for Continuing Education Program will be given the right to take over all of Louis Hall, and that all but one dorm will be closed to students. Dick Knut justified the CCE move, stating that "We needed to be closer to the students besides the entire McDonald Cafeteria just wasn't big enough, and anyways who cares about these brats." The reasons for the dorm changes were explained by Benedict Fink extra special vice- president to the vice-presidents in charge of making sure students are unhappy, "the damned students kept asking for nice rooms, furniture that stays together, showers that work, and a clean bathroom. What do these kids thing this school is made of, money. We

Dear Blabbey letters

Dear Blabbey,

I am a college freshman with a serious problem. Two months ago I met this guy and we really hit it off. It wasn't long before we had an established "relationship" going. Sounds great so far, right? Well, three weeks ago my sister (a sophomore in high school) came to spend the weekend with me. Guess what happened? "James" met her and dumped me. Needless to say, I am heartbroken and feel betrayed. Now my sister and I aren't talking and "James" avoids me. What should I do.

Signed-'Keep it in the Family'.

Dear 'Family',

Why care that he's avoiding you. You should consider yourself lucky. Anyone with such a crude manner is better left alone. As for your sister, she must be confused as well. For a moment try to put sisterhood aside and just be her friend. Let her know exactly what kind of creep she's dealing with since she is obviously too young to get the picture herself. Inform her fast before she gets "dumped" next.

Dear Blabbey,

Lots of my friends don't like to party, but I do. Whenever we go out, they don't like to be sociable and I like to be. Maybe we're growing apart or something but I don't know what to do anymore. This past weekend was the last straw. My parents were away and I had a party (BYOB), but as guests started to show up with booze, my friends started fights with them. So, I asked the guys to leave. Now they won't talk to me. They said I kissed-up to a bunch of "alchies". Was I uncool to my friends?

Confused.

Dear Confused,

You did the right thing. It was wrong for your "friends" to start a brawl in your home over something so trivial such as alcohol. I would have asked them to leave as well. But, your problem does not end with their fighting with your guests; it's more in depth than that. Perhaps it is time to search for what you really want in "true" friends. It doesn't seem that you have all that much in common.

Dear Blabbey,

I have such a dilemma! It seems as though I never know what type of clothes to wear. The styles change so fast and can be so expensive, I'm almost, too scared to wear anything at all! Help!!

Nervous

Dear Nervous,

Don't do anything drastic - what works for "Playboy" magazine could get you arrested in the street. Wear what you like and what suits your personality. In fact, you may want to check out some consignment shops or your mom's old wardrobe. After all, many 60's styles are being reincarnation.

Lake Jovita becomes oil source

By Al Hava Bier
Associate Sheik to Anarchy

The United States' oil problems are solved !!

Recent tests by chemical expert Freedom Star, a 1971 graduate of Cornell University and former rock singer, show that oil skimming operations can begin immediately. Star found that Lake Jovita is 65 percent oil.

"I first realized we needed an expert to test the lake," says Plant Operations Lake Watcher Billy Joe Snowjob, "when students were tossing matches in and watching the pretty colors."

Snowjob was unable to give further comment, as he had to go to the nearest hospital and have his eyebrows extinguished.

Star conducted a month-long series of tests. The tests included intraoral, intravenous, intraocular, and intramural experiments and lit matches. When he was finished, star was without a doubt (or a functioning brain) – Lake Jovita will become the next major U.S. oil source and communal retreat.

Problems have arisen, however. OPEC is clamoring, sweating, and prostrating all over the Middle East.

"They're just jealous," stated President Bush unequivocally,"we got our own unlimited supply of the stuff and they think its just not prudent at this juncture for America to be able to build really big cars again." The President flew to his retreat in Disney's Peter Pan ride to consult with his top aids about the situation.

Lake Jovita/ Middle East crisis expert Bill Quigley points out that what the President says is true: Lake Jovita is an inexhaustible oil source as long as the mysterious chemicals continue to flow into it.

Mary-ot Food Service and Disposal had no comment.
